Goldenson Hanged.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 14.—Alexander Goldenson spent the last night of his life in a manner fully in accord with his conduct ever since the fatal afternoon nearly two years ago when he shot and killed his sweetheart, Little Manie Kelly. After his mother had called and said a last farewell to her son he appeared to break down for a few minutes, but quickly regained his composure and received a call from Father Fassanotte, who tried to administer spiritual consolation to the condemned man. After the priest had left Goldenson engaged in a game of cards, keeping up his hilarity all the time. Soon after midnight he called for wine and drank with his jailors after which he lay down upon his cot and soon fell into a fitful slumber.

When the clock struck the hour of noon Sheriff McMann and deputies entered Goldenson's cell, and after reading the death warrant and shaking hands with the condemned man they started for the scaffold. Goldenson still bore up well, and when he reached the scaffold he made a few remarks to those present, saying he hoped he would be forgiven and go to heaven. He then placed the noose about his own neck, and when the straps and black cap were adjusted the trap was sprung. There was hardly a movement of the body after it fell, and in about 20 minutes it was cut down.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

[From our regular correspondent.]

WASHINGTON, Sept., 7th, 1888.

Representative Phelps, of New Jersey, in his remarks on the Canadian "Retaliation" bill expressed what is the general opinion of Republicans in both Houses on the subject. He cheerfully concedes the President the additional power asked for, but regrets that there is no more likelihood of his using this new power than that he would use the power given him eighteen months ago. Mr. Phelps thinks that his last message and his free trade message sent to Congress last December ought to stand together as the Siamese twins of the presidential policy.

The decided gain made by the Republicans in the Vermont State election is regarded here as a sure indication of the carrying of New York, New Jersey and Connecticut for Harrison, Morton and Protection. The same ratio of gain over the 1884 vote will take those three States out of the doubtful column. "Signs of dawning are already in the sky; the fearful darkness caused by the fear of free trade will soon be over, and the citizens of this country will again take up their march toward general prosperity, and their pathway will be illuminated by the brilliant rays of the bright sun of Protection," is the way an enthusiastic Congressman puts it.

The House, in its mad race for votes on the Pacific slope, passed a bill prohibiting Chinese immigration as soon as the unofficial news of the rejection of the treaty by the Chinese government was received here.

No official news of the rejection of the treaty has yet been received at the State Department. It is needless to say that the Senate will at least have the courtesy to wait for official news of the rejection of the treaty before passing a bill that is bound to make serious complications, and may make war with China.

The Senate substitute for the Mills bill is now ready to be reported to the full Finance Committee of the Senate, and unless the Democrats on that committee throw some unexpected obstruction in the way, it will be reported to the Senate next week.

It is altogether useless for the Democrats to attempt to obstruct the passage of this measure. Such action will only prolong the session as the Republicans have fully determined that no adjournment shall take place until the bill is passed.

Senator Sherman has offered a resolution, which passed by the Senate, calling upon the President to inform the Senate whether the recent treaty with China had been ratified by that country. This is in striking contrast to the indecent haste displayed by the House.

Senator Stewart has offered a resolution for the appointment of a select committee to investigate various matters connected with the execution of the laws relating to public lands and timber depredations. Something is evidently rotten about the General Land Office, and Senator Stewart intends that the people shall know what it is.

Senator Chandler's resolution for an investigation of the last Louisiana State election was called up Wednesday, and Senator Pasco made a feeble attempt to defend his party for some of the terrible charges made by Mr. Chandler. He thinks it is bad taste to stir up such things; they make hard feelings. That's just what the Southern Senators used to say many years ago, whenever anybody referred to the horrors of slavery. Such answers did not answer then, and they will not now.

Every legal voter is entitled to vote at every election, and to have his vote counted—no matter whether he lives in New York or Louisiana.

Sensors Hiscock and Haines have been appointed a sub-committee of the Finance committee to hear representatives of the Knights of labor and others interested in the house bill to prohibit the use of steam plate printing machines in the Bureau of Engraving and printing.

Senator Collom has introduced a bill declaring trusts unlawful.

Senator Vest in a speech delivered to the Senate, attempted to rebuke an employe of the Senate for having written a book in favor of protection, taking the absurd ground that he had no right to write such a book, because he was a Senate employe. Little Vest was probably sorry afterwards that he said a word on the subject, so numerous were the cases pointed out by the Republican Senators by similar Democrats.

The bill to "declare unlawful trusts and combinations in restraint of trade and protection" was considered at the last meeting of the Senate Committee on Finance. It was not disposed of, but from opinions expressed, it is almost certain to be favorably reported.

The Oklahoma bill was up again this week in the House.

Many Democrats are looking longingly toward the vacant mission to Russia. Cleveland understands the value of expectations in a political campaign too well to fill this position until after the election.

The Democrats have appointed a committee of local Democrats to solicit and collect subscriptions throughout the departments for the campaign fund. This is another evidence of civil service reform.

Political Announcement.

In another column the editor of this journal announces himself as a candidate for the office of Assemblyman for Ormsby county.

He does not ask for this office on the basis that the APPEAL has for many years past been a front rank supporter of the Republican party in this county, but grounds his claims on the necessity of a thorough water storage and irrigation system in this State.

The question with which the next Legislature will deal is of more importance to this State than any political consideration.

The APPEAL has long urged the people to consider this matter, and now believes that the gravity of the situation, so long overlooked, is now fully realized by the taxpayers of the State.

In times gone by it has been a custom in Nevada to allow Legislative delegates to be elected before their views on matters of State improvement had been canvassed by the taxpayers whom they were supposed to represent.

The result of this system is too well known to need any comment here. The writer, in soliciting the support of the taxpayers of Ormsby, will hold himself in readiness to answer any inquiry put to him by any qualified voter of Ormsby relative to his views on any question likely to be presented at the next Legislature.

A voter has the same right to ask these questions of a candidate as he would have to ask a carpenter he was about to engage, how he proposed to build his house.

The APPEAL hopes to see every candidate on the Legislative ticket state squarely to the taxpayers how he stands on the subject of irrigation and water storage, and also his views on all subjects which effect the material interests of Ormsby county.

Above all, the Legislative nominees should be men who know how to distinguish between bills affecting the interests of Ormsby county and the interests of the State at large.

With this end in view the APPEAL tenders the free use of its columns to any Legislative nominee, that he may define his position, as well as to any voter in this county, irrespective of party, who desires to discuss the subjects which are recognized as of such vital importance to us all.
